

Graduate Mentor Fellows Program
2023-2024 Application

Graduate Mentor Fellows are graduate students working to develop and apply their skills as mentors. Over the 2023-2024 academic year, Graduate Mentor Fellows will join a cohort of graduate student peers to develop their own mentoring skills through guided training, collaboration, and reflection designed to support their personal, professional, and academic goals. In turn, Graduate Mentor Fellows will work with faculty members to co-mentor undergraduate students in research and/or creative work.

An important goal of this position is to promote best practices in mentoring across the institution to advance collaboration for public good discovery. The Graduate Mentor Fellows Program, which is part of the DU Grand Challenges initiative, is made possible with generous support from the Arthur Vining Davis Foundations.

Students enrolled in any program at the University of Denver are welcome to apply and will receive mentoring as they learn to mentor undergraduate students. As is good practice when considering professional development opportunities, we encourage graduate students to discuss this opportunity with their graduate program faculty advisors.

To apply to become a Graduate Mentor Fellow, you will be asked to respond to the following questions using this link (or copy/paste https://udenver.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_3vXdmTdw7NuyITM). Students will be compensated $21/hour for at least a 10 hour/quarter commitment.
